

Healthcare Compliance

NAME _____

DATE _____

- True      False      1. The purpose of a corporate compliance program is to help you stay in compliance with healthcare industry regulations and ensure you are paid correctly for healthcare services.
- True      False      2. Healthcare laws and regulations are aimed at increasing the quality of patient care and protecting patient safety.
- True      False      3. Healthcare fraud and abuse may include submitting bills for tests or procedures together and to reduce cost.
- True      False      4. One of OIG's areas of greatest areas of concern for fraud and abuse is the use of incorrect billing codes.
- True      False      5. One goal of a compliance program is to improve patient care.
- True      False      6. Your facility's compliance officer is your primary resource for questions on federal rules, laws and regulations.
- True      False      7. Your organization's Code of Conduct helps you comply with regulations and make changes when errors occur.
- True      False      8. Training in compliance is one tool to protect your organizations.
- True      False      9. You are expected to follow all the institutional and employee responsibilities for compliance outlined in the federal litigation manual.
- True      False      10. The more you know about the rules, the better the quality of care you deliver.
- True      False      11. If you are aware of non-compliance in your area, you are not required to report it unless it involved a documentation error or one involving patient care.
- True      False      12. Monitoring and audits are primarily used to address compliance issues before it is too late.
- True      False      13. Audits are usually conducted on a regular basis by the compliance department or outside auditors.
- True      False      14. Reporting systems are designed to improve overall performance.
- True      False      15. When you report non-compliance, you can request that your report be kept confidential.
- True      False      16. Corrective actions for non-compliance are outlined in the written code of conduct.
- True      False      17. A typical response to correct risky processes and prevent future errors may include additional education for employees who work in specific areas that are considered high risk.
- True      False      18. If you think something is not right, the best approach is to stop and think about what would be the best approach before you complete the task.
- True      False      19. Compliance programs also protect your tax dollars.
- True      False      20. Being out of compliance hurts everyone.